MILLINERY.—We are now selling our hats at cost. Come and get a bargain.

MRS. TIM BRADSHAW,
MISS EFFIE BRADSHAW.

The following real estate changed hands last Monday: Russell & Murrell conveyed to Jo F. Patterson the house and lot in Columbia, known as the Nell property, for $1,050; Talmage Smith sold his residence on Greensburg St. to J. D. Flowers for $1,200. Mr. Smith will remove to Texas and Mr. Flowers will remove to Columbia; J. D. Flowers conveyed his farm, on Butler's Fork, to Tom Hughes for $3,800; J. D. Walker bought of his son, Allen, the Sid Barbee property for $3,000. Mr. Walker will remove to Columbia; Russell & Murrell sold Mr. Garvin, of Cumberland county, a building lot for $200. It is located on St. Clair Avenue.

All difference between the United States and Panama have been settled amicably. Secretary Taft issued an executive order and signed it for President Roosevelt, which was assented to in a letter by President Amador of Panama. Among other things provided for in the order are the turning over of the customs receipts of the ports to the Government of Panama; Panama agrees to reduce her tariff from 15 per cent. ad valorem to 10 per cent.; absolute free trade is guaranteed between the canal zone and the republic of Panama, and the gold standard shall be put into effect.

Pearson Bartleson, of Wayne county, bought of Frank Waggener, last Monday, a pair of mules for $325. J. S. Oatts, same county, bought a horse of Terry & Pedigo for $150.

The total vote cast in Kentucky at November election, 435,565. Democratic majority in the State, 11,893.

A. W. Pedigo, Glasgow, bought here county court four cotton mules at an average of $90 per head.

Messrs. J. S. Stapp and Ruel Cabell will conduct a singing at Zion the third Sunday in this month.

Rev. Bell will not begin a protracted meeting at Milltown until Monday night Dec. 12.

Christmas tree at the Christian church Monday night of the holidays.

Sam Terry bought two horses here Monday at $90 and $165.

I have 250 barrels of corn for sale and 12 tons of old mules.

W. H. Williams,

OMER T. KENDALL DEAD.

Omer T. Kendall, a printer in the employ of the John P. Morton Company, dropped dead at noon to-day while setting type. He was seated on his stool, placing type in the stick. The dropping of the stick to the floor attracted the attention of an employee. Mr. Kendall's head had dropped upon his case. He was breathing heavily. He was placed on the floor and Dr. Vance was summoned. Before the arrival of the physician Mr. Kendall died.

Mr. Kendall went to work as usual this morning and seemed in perfect health. It is thought that death was due to heart trouble.

Mr. Kendall was born sixty-six years ago at Salem, Ind. He served in the Civil War in the Thirtieth Indiana Volunteers as a Federal soldier. After the war he moved to Owensboro, Ky., and founded the Owensboro Examiner, the first paper published at that place. Three years ago he came to Louisville and accepted a position with the John P. Morton Company. He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Lucy Calvin, of Owensboro, and three children—Mrs. P. A. Evans, Miss Fay Kendall and Omer C. Kendall.

Coroner Kelley was summoned. The remains were taken to the residence of Mrs. P. A. Evans, with whom he made his home. The funeral will take place tomorrow from the residence.

The above is from Wednesday's Louisville Times of last week. Two years ago the deceased was a resident of Columbia and was associated with Judge H. C. Baker in the publication of the Spectator. In the last year he was frequently met by Mr. J. E. Murrell, of this office, and upon each occasion Mr. Kendall expressed a desire to return to Columbia and here end his days. Four months ago this office wrote him to come, but our letter failed to reach him. He is kindly remembered by many of our citizens.

INTEGRITY ABOVE PARTISANSHIP.

The unanimous opinion of the Court of Appeals in the Bradburn-Galloway contest from Warren county coming after the reign of partisanship, which in many instances has extended to the judiciary itself, is real refreshing to honest and fair-minded men regardless of political opinion. This case in which the Circuit Judge-ship was involved was according to the opinion of the Court of Appeals the most flagrant case of tampering with the ballots after the count was made that there has been any record of in the State. The face of the returns showed a majority for Galloway the Republican candidate. Bradburn the Democrat filed a contest and demanded that the ballot boxes in certain precincts in Warren county should be opened and the ballots counted. This was done and showed a difference of several hundred votes from the certificates that were signed by the officers of the election. The Court of Appeals in reversing Judge Osborne and deciding in favor of Galloway declared that stamps on a number of ballots had been made opposite Judge Bradburn's name and that the marking event showed a different ink from what had been used in the election. According to the Court it was a clear case of an attempt to steal the election after the returns had been made out and a bungling case at that. We are partisan when it comes to politics and for our fellows until the election is over then we are for the candidate to have the office who received the majority of the votes and opposed to any attempt to falsify the returns. We believe in all cases and under all circumstances that honesty should be put above partisanship.—E. Town News.

A SAD SITUATION.

During the campaign the Baltimore Sun contained the following editorial, which furnishes much food for reflection:

"If an end is not put to the practice of corrupting voters the United States will soon have the evil distinction of possessing the most venal electorate in the world. There is scarcely a 'doubtful state' in which there are not large numbers of electors whose ballots are for sale to the highest bidder. It is this class to which the 'practical politician' addresses himself. Their votes count for as much as the votes of the wisest and best men in the community. The price paid them for their venality has been steadily rising in successive campaigns. They constitute now a permanently venal class, and their votes have to be reckoned with in every election. The vote of the clergyman, the professional business man, the student, the mechanic, the clerk, the farmer—indeed, of any honest man with convictions on political issues—may be offset by the ballot of a man who hawks his vote around and sells it to the purchaser who can afford to pay most for it."

That there is some buying of votes there can be no question, but let us hope that it is not done on such wholesale manner as the foregoing Sun editorial would indicate. At one time the selling of votes was the principal feature of English elections. It is said that one man spent as much as £100 to buy a seat in the House of Commons, but in these later days the bad habit has almost fallen into disuse. Let us hope that an improvement will be made in this country in this regard. Anyway, it is not so bad as the Sun makes out.

Scarcely a week passes that we do not hear of the launching of a new battleship, with its huge guns, destructive machinery of all kinds, accommodations for hundreds of men and officers, and costing several millions of dollars. The object and only object of a battleship is to destroy, to kill, to menace other nations. We would like to hear occasionally, by way of contrast, of the launching of some great merchant steamers to carry to distant lands the surplus crops raised by our busy and industrious farmers. It is pleasant to read about holds adapted to carry thousands of cattle, millions of bushels of grain and all the other products of this teeming land of ours. Let's have a surcease of battleships for awhile and some more of the agencies of peace and civilization.—Ex.

News from the South is to the effect that though the fields are white with cotton the farmers are in need of help to pick it. Good prices are offered to pickers, but the demand exceeds the supply. Meantime in every southern village and city are healthy and strong idle men and women who are complaining that they can find no employment. Perhaps this means no employment that they are willing to do. Many people want easy jobs, in other words to earn their money with as little work as possible. But all those who are willing to take hold at any thing that comes handy, may find jobs of various kinds on farms that unskilled help may do. Of course the lazy and worthless, the professionally idle, the tramp element won't work at all. But there is no excuse in this country for any man remaining idle long if he is of the right makeup and disposition.—Ex.

Two candidates, one in Calloway and the other in Woodford have died since the early primaries in these counties and in consequence there will have to be primary elections to nominate their successors. We are already having one of the fruits of the absurd idea of nominating candidates a year before the election.

There is a great civic movement in progress in Louisville to secure the enforcement of the law. We know of no city where there is a greater demand for such action. Gambling is going on in all parts of the city; the prostitute flaunts her same upon the principal streets, the saloons are kept open on Sunday in direct violation of the law and so is the variety theatre. The men who are undertaking the task of reforming Louisville have Augean stables to clean, but the moral people of Kentucky regardless of politics are with them in their efforts.—E. Town News.

VOICIENLY ASSAULTED BY NEGRO.

Mr. Ruben Satterfield, proprietor of the noted Satterfield farm, on Barren river, in Allen county, was the victim of a brutal and vicious assault by one of his farm hands named Goose Austin, a negro, last Thursday morning about 7 o'clock.

The assault occurred in what is known as the "Horse Shoe Bend," on the Satterfield farm, about three miles from the dwelling. There is only one witness, a white man, and he did not see the beginning of it. When he first saw the trouble Mr. Satterfield was lying on the ground and the negro was standing over him with a big stick. The man called to some other hands working nearby, and when the negro saw them coming he ran away, and has not been seen since, although he is said to be hiding near Austin, in this county.

Mr. Satterfield was carried to his home unconscious and physicians were summoned. An examination disclosed a serious fracture of the skull, the only dangerous wound, but there were great black, bruised places on his body, where the negro had struck him. Friday night the physicians removed several pieces of the man's skull and trephined the wound, but Mr. Satterfield has not yet regained consciousness, and the chances in favor of his recovery are meager.—Glasgow Times.

MR CARLISLE COMES HOME.

It is conceded even by his enemies that the Hon. J. G. Carlisle is the ablest Kentuckian produced in a generation; all that he lacked of true greatness was back-bone—an omission that was as fatal to him as it is to every human being similarly affected. In an evil hour, Mr. Carlisle sat himself up in judgment against the home people that had made his political fortunes, and the political party that had prompted him to leadership. He was ground in the dust of an overwhelming public opinion, humiliated, disgraced and practically driven from home. It is true that fortune has favored him in New York and that he is now a reputed millionaire, but the old friends are the best friends, and Mr. Carlisle in New York is a lonely man, just as in Kentucky he was a marked one. Money is not all there is in life. If it were, then God help all humanity. But Mr. Carlisle has come home. There was no blare of trumpets around his return. There were few welcoming hands, and there ought to have been fewer still. He slipped quietly in, and more quietly out. After his years of absence, Mr. Carlisle appears among his old friends, returns to the proud state that had given him her highest official honors, for the purpose of forcing social equality upon them. Of course he is paid a liberal fee—no fee can be too large for work such as that—but after all is said the fact remains that Mr. Carlisle comes to his native state to force the coeducation of the white and black races at Berea college; an institution that was a blot on the fair name of Kentucky and that had been wiped out by the legislature of the state, so far as the intermingling of the two races on terms of educational and social equality was concerned. It is for this purpose, and this alone, that Mr. Carlisle returns to The Old Kentucky Home.

It were better that Mr. Carlisle had never been born than to have come to the land of his birth on an errand such as this. Kentuckians have forgiven him many offenses, but for this they will never forgive him. Let him go back to the east, where money counts for all; let him sit among the white men and the black men of New York, where there is no color line. The friends of his youth and his riper years want no more of him. The Carlisle of the long ago is dead; the reconstructed and resurrected Carlisle is damned.—Glasgow Times.
